Immigrant students face a unique set of challenges when they come to America. They may be struggling to learn a new language. They may be adjusting to a new culture. And they may be facing discrimination and prejudice from their peers and community members.

For many immigrant students, the challenges of immigration can be overwhelming. They may feel isolated and alone. They may doubt their ability to succeed in school and in life. And they may worry about the future of their families.

Despite the challenges they face, immigrant students are often determined to make their dreams a reality. They study hard. They participate in extracurricular activities. And they set high goals for themselves.
