Lowe's receipts are not mere reproductions of mundane shopping lists, but rather imaginative recreations that capture the essence of the ingredients and the stories behind them. Each piece is meticulously created using a combination of collage, painting, and drawing, resulting in a whimsical and often thought-provoking work of art.

A Journey Through Time and Flavor

The collection spans centuries, from ancient Egyptian papyrus scrolls to 19th-century apothecary lists. Lowe's receipts transport us to different eras and cultures, inviting us to explore the culinary traditions of bygone times.

In one receipt, we encounter a detailed account of ancient Roman spices, such as cumin, cinnamon, and saffron, painted with vibrant hues that evoke the richness of the Roman Empire. Another piece depicts a 16th-century alchemist's recipe for an elixir, complete with intricate sketches of herbs and exotic ingredients.

Culinary Inspiration and Artistic Ingenuity

Lowe's receipts are not only visually stunning, but they also offer a glimpse into the culinary world of the past. They reveal the ingredients and techniques used by chefs and home cooks throughout history, providing inspiration for modern culinary adventures.

Some receipts focus on specific dishes, such as a traditional Italian pasta recipe or a French cheese platter. Others are more abstract, representing themes or culinary concepts. In one striking piece, Lowe depicts a "Recipe for Happiness," using images of laughter, music, and shared meals.
