Use a Pencil to Open a Stuck Zipper

No more struggling with stubborn zippers! Simply insert the tip of a pencil into the zipper teeth and gently slide it down. The graphite will act as a lubricant, easing the zipper open with minimal effort.

Transform a Potato into a Natural Dishwasher

Say goodbye to harsh chemicals and hello to a sustainable cleaning solution. Cut a potato in half and rub it on your dirty dishes. The starch in the potato acts as a natural detergent, removing dirt and food particles effectively.

Use Nail Polish to Stop Runny Tights

Avoid embarrassing wardrobe malfunctions with this clever hack. If you notice a run forming in your tights, apply a small dab of clear nail polish to the edges of the run. This will seal the fabric and prevent it from spreading further.

Create a Temporary Phone Stand with a Rubber Band

Need a hands-free way to watch videos or video chat? Wrap a rubber band around your phone and your finger. The rubber band will provide a stable base that keeps your phone upright.

Use a Wine Cork to Remove Dents from Wood

Restore the beauty of your wooden furniture with this genius trick. Apply steam to the dented area and then use a damp wine cork to gently rub the dent. The steam and moisture will soften the wood, allowing the cork to push the dent out.

These are just a few of the countless hidden uses for everyday things revealed in "Sneakiest Uses For Everyday Things." Prepare to be inspired and amazed as you discover the remarkable versatility of objects you thought you knew well.
